To the Fans.

In presenting this little work to the "fans," it has been the aim of the publisher to make it as correct, concise and complete as possible. The tables will be found correct and should prove interesting. The advertisers—who have made its publication possible — are all "in it," and should receive a hearing.

Trusting that each "fan's" favorite may win the pennant, I remain, Respectfully,

THE PUBLISHER.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF AMERICA.

Since 1884 the winners of the respective pennants of the National League and American Association have played a post-season series for the championship of America. The following table shows the results:

YEAR	Contesting Teams.	Result of Games.
1884....	Providence vs. Metropolitans...	Providence....	3	Metropolitans..	0	Drawn....	0
1885....	Chicago vs. St. Louis.....	Chicago.....	3	St. Louis.....	3	Drawn .	1
1886....	Chicago vs. St. Louis.....	Chicago.....	2	St. Louis.....	4	Drawn....	0
1887....	Detroit vs. St. Louis.....	Detroit.....	11	St. Louis.....	4	Drawn....	0
1888....	New York vs. St. Louis.....	New York.....	6	St. Louis.....	4	Drawn....	0
1889....	New York vs. Brooklyn.....	New York.....	6	Brooklyn.....	3	Drawn....	0
1890*...	Brooklyn vs. Louisville.....	Brooklyn.....	3	Louisville.....	3	Drawn....	1

*Cold weather put a stop to the series, and it was agreed to resume the games in the spring of 1891. The fact that the Boston team of the Players League was not allowed to compete robbed the series of its significance.

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

The American Association began its career in 1882, and after a hard fight attained its prominent position in the world of professional baseball. Its record follows:

YEAR.	Champion Club.	Won.	Lost.	Av'ge.	Champion Batter.	Club.	Av'ge.
1882....	Cincinnati....	54	26	.673	Browning.....	Louisville..	....

1890....	Louisville.....	87	44	.664	Goodall.....	Louisville.....	.422

*Bases on the balls were credited as base hits in the records of 1887.

In 1884 the Association experimented with a twelve-club circuit, but it was found to be too cumbersome, and has never been tried since.

Since its organization the following clubs have held membership in the American Association: St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Athletic, Allegheny (Pittsburgh), Baltimore, Metropolitan, Columbus, Toledo, Brooklyn, Indianapolis, Washington, Virginia (Richmond), Cleveland, Kansas City, Syracuse and Rochester.
